TOur ladies are always a little late in attending places of amusement, and consequently the attention that should have been paid to the overture and opening chorus, was much distracted by such interruptions, a fault that we trust will be corrected on the following nights.

There are, no doubt, ladies whose taste has not been sufficiently cultivated to make music of the best class an enjoyment to them, and who will still regularly attend the opera. To these the omission of the earlier scenes of the drams may be no loss, but should they reflect that their late arrival disturbs and lessens the enjoyment of their friends and acquaintances, they would not be apt to repeat such a solecism against good manners.

It would require the pen of a professor of Music, to describe the many excellencies of the Orchestra. We do not profess a knowledge of the gaye science, but will simply remark that the orchestra, though small, is excellent. What there is of it, is of the best quality. In stringed instruments it is rich, and the admirable tact and management of the leader, made even the absence of the horns, a secondary consideration.

The singers were well supported by the orches-> tra, and its metronomical precision was quite remarkable to us, as we have had occasionally inflicted upon us performances so discordant as must have made "the angels weep."

Of all that has been said of MADAME DEVRIES, not a word has been said too much, as she possesses singular merit, both as a singer and as an actress. Her countenance is expressive, her action graceful; and her histrionic talent cannot be too highly appreciated. True to nature, she manifests no violence, which ordinary artists are apt to bestow on telling points, but merging her whole being in the character she undertakes to personate, she is consistent in every look and movement, and makes one forget that she is not Lucia, but Ross DEVRIES. The appliance which she receives is heartfelt, cordial and universal, and will make her more and more popular as her merits become better

Signor Taffanelli has a voice of much power. and his manner is unaffected and animated; his face is flexible and impressive, and he delivered his music with an ease that betokens a thorough acquaintance with his business.

We hope to form a better acquaintance with Signor Vietti, who sings with great sweetness .-We are inclined to think that he lacks power, and this was perceptible in the Quartette with Lucy Ashton and Raymond. In fact, we feared that he would break down before the end of the opera, but he executed the difficult passages of the last act with so much correctness and pathos, as to satisfy us that he had been only husbanding his efforts for the occasions where they would be most required. The chorus is well drilled, and sided the general effect of the opers, the whole performance of which gave unlimited satisfaction. We shall not be surprised if we hear of many fault-finders, but let us assure such that the defects are not with the Company, but with themselves .-Nashville is greatly lauded for the fondness which its citizens display for music. Now a taste for music may consist in a fondness for reels and jigs, and for negro melodies; or it may be more cultivated, and create a real enjoyment in the more celebrated works of the best Masters. We shall see. for now is the test in which line the taste of the Nashvillians runs.

DAN RICE and all bands of negro singers give usthe palm of being the most liberal patrons they meet with any where in the Union. What sort of character for taste, discernment and liberality, will the singers of the Italian Opera give us when they leave? Let us conclude with Hamlet, that we had better have a bad epitaph after death, than their ill report while we live.

Rev. Dr. Senon, Secretary of the Mis-Missionary Board of the M. E. Church South, will preach at the McKendre Church this morning, at 101, and this evening at 8, o'clock.

We would call the attention of our readers to the card of Mr. FERRELL in this morning's issue, He has removed his school from Cooper's new building to the large and commodious room formerly occupied by Mr. Paschal.

We learn from the Knoxville Statesman that the mechanics of that "city" held a meeting on the 15th, and appointed a Committee to draft a constitution for a Mechanics' Association. By unanimous vote it was resolved that Gov. Johnson be invited to deliver an address before the Association, as he returns to Nashville.
